ARRIVES AT WICHITA

Flying 45 Minutes Behind Record Schedule of Lindbergh's

WICHITA, May 13.—(AP)—Behind the record Lindbergh schedule for a one stop speed flight from California to New York, Roscoe Turner, Los Angeles pilot, took off for the eastern city at 11:12 a. m. after a twenty minute refueling stop here.

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—(AP)—Striving for a new trans-continental speed record for an airplane, Roscoe Turner, Los Angeles pilot, left here at 1 a. m. today on a one stop solo flight to New York. Turner will attempt to break the record of fourteen hours, twenty-three minutes and twenty-seven seconds, set on April 20 by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and Mrs. Lindbergh.

Like Lindbergh, Turner will stop to refuel at Wichita, Kansas. The big cream and red monoplane was loaded with 400 gallons of gasoline. The ship, make as that of Lindbergh's, but is powered by a 525 horse power motor, 100 horse power engine that that of Col. Lindbergh's.

WICHITA, Kan., May 13.—(AP)—Roscoe Turner, flying well behind Charles A. Lindbergh's record schedule, landed here at 10:43 a. m. to refuel on a one-stop flight in an attempt to set a new speed record from Los Angeles, California, to New York. Turner's time for the 1,240 miles from Los Angeles to Wichita was seven hours and forty-one minutes.

Col. Lindbergh, with Mrs. Lindbergh, set a cross country record over the same course from California to New York in fourteen hours, twenty-three minutes and twenty-seven seconds. The Lindbergh flight to Wichita was six hours, fifty-six minutes and ten seconds. Turner's was approximately forty-five minutes behind record time.

M'Alister Heads Teachers College

Succeeds Dr. W. B. Torreyson, Resigned, at Conway Institute

LITTLE ROCK, May 13.—Dr. B. Torreyson, President of Arkansas State Teachers College, Conway, for the past 12 years, resigned yesterday and Col. H. L. McAlister, head of the Extension Department and acting president for the past year, was elected to succeed him.

Dr. Torreyson has been in ill health for more than a year and was granted a leave of absence last fall. He was reported improved but it not strong enough to resume duties of the president's office, it was said.

In accepting Dr. Torreyson's resignation the Board of Trustees, meeting at the state Department of Education yesterday, elected him president emeritus as an appreciation of his long service to the institution and his contribution to education. As president emeritus, Dr. Torreyson will devote as much of his time to the institution as his health will permit.

In his letter of resignation, Dr. Torreyson expressed gratitude for the board's co-operation and for the honor conferred by naming the new library for him.

The board received a report from Dr. H. G. Holz, head of the College of Education, University of Arkansas, who recently conducted a survey of the Teachers College. The report showed that the Committee on Administration and Transfer Credits at the university has raised the rating of the Teachers College as to both junior and senior college work.

Hereafter graduates of the college who bank in the upper 25 per cent of the graduating class will be admitted to full graduate standing in the university. Those who rank in the upper 40 per cent, but not in the upper 25 per cent, will be admitted to graduate standing but will be required to complete two-fifths additional work for the master's degree. Other graduates will be given a maximum of senior standing.

The board approved a report by the university committee on admission recommending certain changes in classification of students, in curriculum, extension work, laboratory equipment and library facilities.

Murder Verdict Returned By Jury

Richard Johnson, Dripping Springs, Declared Victim of Violence

VAN BUREN, May 13.—Richard Marion ("Dick") Johnson, 56, whose body was found underneath the bluff above Lee's creek, three miles west, came to his death at the hands of unknown persons, was the verdict of the coroner's jury at an inquest held here Monday by Dr. J. M. Stenart of Van Buren, county coroner. A gash about two inches long on the left temple is believed to have caused Johnson's death. The skull was fractured.

Johnson, a farmer of the Dripping Springs community, came to Van Buren Saturday. He told his foster brother, Claude Haines, that he would not be home Saturday night and probably would not return Sunday, if the weather was inclement. His body was found by Frank Samuelson, who lives a short distance from where the body was found.

Johnson frequented the drive and the bluffs during the last few months and had been seen there several times at night.

Darrow to Defend Chi Bottle Merchant

CHICAGO, May 13.—(AP)—Clarence Darrow, internationally known lawyer, has weakened in his determination never to take another criminal case. He has announced that he will defend Joseph Grein, president of the Chicago Malt Products association, whose Madison street store was raided by prohibition agents last week.

The raid, ordered by Prohibition Administrator Yellowley, was made on the theory that the Supreme Court's decision permitting the seizure of articles used in the manufacture of intoxicants would apply to the stock of malt syrup, bottles, bottle caps and the like. It was the first raid conducted here under the decision.

"I am taking this case because Grein is a friend," said Mr. Darrow. "I believe he is innocent. In addition, I am interested in this latest piece of fanaticism in the attempt to enforce prohibition."

James O. Caltan, night captain of police, and Bert Ziegenfuss, a patrolman, resigned with Chief Hachney. The federal agents alleged they had assembled evidence connecting Hachney and Davidson with taking money from Clarence Reed, negro bootlegger, on a "50-50" basis.

Reed is under a three-year sentence to the penitentiary on a charge of persistent violation of the liquor laws.

Football Captain Resigns From U.S. Military Academy

Christian Keener Cagle Marries 2 Years Ago. Record Reveals

AGAINST ARMY RULES

Was Married to Miss Marion Hale, at Gretna, La., Aug. 25, 1928

WEST POINT, N. Y., May 13.—(AP)—Cadet Christian Keener Cagle resigned from the United States Military Academy this afternoon after his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Cagle, said that he was married. His resignation was requested by Maj. Gen. William R. Smith, superintendent of the academy, and immediately forwarded it to the War department at Washington.

NEW ORLEANS, May 13.—(AP)—Records in the court house at Gretna, Jefferson Parish, Louisiana, today revealed that Christian Keener Cagle, redheaded Army football captain, and Miss Marion Manford Hale, pretty auburn haired girl of New Roads, La., were married on August 25, 1928. The marriage was performed by George J. Traught, justice of the Peace at Gretna, who went back in his records for the past seven years and located the certificate.

The marriage was kept a secret two years, and was a surprise to the friends of Cagle as well as his wife. He is an admirer on the gridiron, and his acquaintances except for those friends who were on the inside and had shielded the secret, because of army regulations. The marriage was described by one witness to the ceremony as "just one of those impulsive marriages."

WEST POINT, N. Y., May 13.—(AP)—Immediate dismissal of Christian Keener Cagle from the Military Academy was forecast by army officers following news dispatches confirming the report of Cagle's marriage. He is a member of the football team, and his marriage was a direct breaking of the rules of an army student. Marriage of any cadet is prohibited by regulations, and a leave of furlough he is obliged to sign a certificate to guarantee he will do nothing to violate the rules.

New Light On The War

THE present British government may not be quite as radical as some people anticipated it would be when Ramsay MacDonald was chosen prime minister; nevertheless, it is doing a very courageous, enlightened bit of work in publishing a new set of official government documents bearing on the origin of the World War.

This set of documents contains one very surprising disclosure. It proves that as far back as 1907 the British and French general staffs laid plans for the violation of Belgian neutrality in the event of war with Germany.

George Clemenceau—the same "Tiger" who called down the wrath of humanity on the heads of the Germans for sending an army through Belgium—urged King Edward VII to be ready to send 300,000 British soldiers through Belgium in case war with Germany broke out. This, he pointed out, would create a welcome diversion from the expected German assault on the French frontier.

"Generals at the front in war time," said M. Clemenceau, "have no time to think of such small matters as neutrality and international agreements."

Which remark sounds strangely in tune with that famous "scrap of paper" speech which helped so greatly to crystallize world sentiment against Germany in 1914.

To be sure, this disclosure does not really make Germany's action much less heinous. The French and British only talked about it; Germany actually did it. Nevertheless, no one can read of it without suffering a profound shock.

The violation of Belgium's neutrality was the one thing that brought England into the war. The British public would never have consented to being led into the conflict if it had not been for that event. To learn, at this late date, that the British government had planned to do the same thing is very disturbing.

It is too late to do anything about it, of course. But we get a new light on the characters of the various "statesmen" who were in charge of Europe's destiny in the days that led up to the war.

The Crime Problem Solved

Professor Harper of the University of Georgia has passed on a tip to Mr. Wickersham and his commission which should lower their fever a few degrees. While they have been sweating buckets of blood over the cause and cure of crime, attributing it to many factors, they seem to have overlooked the real cause which the Georgia savant outlines as follows:

"In this country the annual per capita consumption of tobacco has increased from about six pounds in 1900 to nine pounds in 1920. Nearly every smoker drinks coffee and the per capita consumption of coffee and sugar have both increased about 50 per cent in the past 20 years. All this is probably partly responsible for the increase of crime and divorce, although perhaps few smokers would concede that. Some very estimable gentlemen use tobacco, but at the same time it can hardly be disputed that the great majority of criminals also do."

The honorable "prof" apparently applies that system of logic which declares that of one phenomenon accompanies another then it necessarily is partly the cause of it, that is, as an example, if the sun shines on Tuesday, it shames because it is that day of the week as much as because of any meteorological conditions which may prevail.

Ridiculous as that may seem it is not one whit more foolish than Professor Harper's broad conclusions. But let us apply his logic to other social phenomena. The development of the telephone, the radio and the talking movie, as well as the graphophone has come within the last 20 years. Each is a sound machine. Each records the human voice, therefore, the people are talking more nonsense today than ever in their lives. We don't believe a word of it.

"It is known, even to those naive members of the anti-cigarette organizations, that tobacco's effect is soothing rather than exciting. But the professor intimates that it supersedes a crime. The same is true of coffee to the average drinker despite much pother about the "intoxicating" effect of the drink.

Professor Harper also lets the automobile in for a part of the blame. No such pronouncement would be typical unless the motor vehicle came in for a panning. But nowhere, so far as we can discover, does he say one word about the suddenly developed hysteria in America to save the other fellow from himself which has resulted in the passage of sumptuary laws obviously virtually impossible of enforcement. But that's something else—we suppose.—Arkansas Democrat.

Flowers That Bloom in the Spring!

Daily WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

NBA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—American business men are fighting hard to regain the foreign trade which has been lost in the last few months.

Exports, which slumped along with the general business depression in this country, are vital to American prosperity. If they were eliminated completely between two and three million employees would be forced out of work, according to business students. The slump in exports was itself responsible for the idleness of a large number of the unemployed in recent months.

Edward N. Hurley, president of the American Manufacturers' Export Association, observes that concerns in this country interested in exports have been applying themselves vigorously since the first of the year to stem the decrease in foreign trade and turn the trend backward toward former levels. The situation is only now beginning to improve.

Go Abroad for Business

Hurley was the wartime chairman of the Shipping Board. He is a veteran manufacturer and an authority on industry and economics. He was interviewed while here to attend the annual meeting of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

"I wrote to each of our 743 member concerns in the American Manufacturers' Export Association, and had replies from 85 or 90 per cent," he says.

"I found that 113 presidents or vice presidents of these companies were abroad, promoting the development of foreign markets."

"It is going to take a lot of digging and fighting to get back where we were in foreign trade because we are faced with unsettled and unfavorable conditions throughout the world. But many of our manufacturers seem to be on their toes, and appear to know what to do to overcome the obstacles."

"Here are some figures which will give you an idea of what foreign trade means to the people of this country:

"Of 3000 members of the Illinois Manufacturers' Association we found that 900 were engaged in foreign trade, manufacturing and selling their wares in the world's markets."

"Those 900 employ 400,000 men, of whom 50,000 are working directly on foreign orders. If you assume that each of the 50,000 workers has an average of three other persons in his family that means that there are at least 200,000 persons in Illinois depending upon and profiting by foreign orders—depending on exports for work and subsistence. That is a rather low figure, I believe, and of course in some other states the percentage of workers dependent on foreign trade is larger."

"The more foreign countries to which we can sell the better off we will be when a slump comes."

"The recent lull in business has not been merely local. Our foreign trade fell off because of various unsettled world conditions and heavy unemployment in many of the larger nations, such as Great Britain and Germany. Argentina, Brazil and other South American countries were having their business troubles along with the nations of Europe."

OH YES.

Run as Wets in Pennsylvania

NBA Philadelphia Bureau Anti-prohibition legislation is their platform. Here are Francis H. Bohlen, above, and Thomas W. Phillips, below, candidates on an out-and-out "wet" ticket for United States senator and governor, respectively. In the Pennsylvania republican primary of May 20, Bohlen is a professor at the University of Pennsylvania law school and ex-Congressman Phillips is a millionaire business man.

each one of the suspects in turn. And, when everything seems hopelessly entangled, Philo Vance puts his finger on the guilty person, and proves him guilty.

The final climax and explanation of the crime is the strange, ever conceived by any detective fiction writer. Although the clues are presented to the audience as they occur throughout the picture, it is a safe bet that very few, if any, uninitiated persons will grasp their significance and guess the solution of the story before Vance explains it. Many tried last night, but few boasted that they had out-guessed the author.

"The Benson Murder Case," is a really entertaining baffler, one that will test the detective powers of the best sleuth in the audience. And it's great entertainment.

County Agents

Watermelons are becoming more important as a food staple. Lynn Smith county agent, and calls our attention to the following article:
Refreshing, juicy, fine-flavored watermelons have still another virtue for the consumer who is interested in food values. Watermelons have been found by the Bureau of Home Economics of the United States Department of Agriculture, to be a good source of two important vitamins, A and C, and to contain detectable amounts of vitamins B and G. The growth and good physical condition of the laboratory animals in the tests for each vitamin indicated that the watermelon in their diets supplied the vitamin being studied. All the experimental animals ate the watermelon readily, and the guinea pigs developed a keen watermelon appetite.

The feeding experiments were conducted by the Tom Watson variety of watermelon, which makes up about 90 per cent of commercial shipments. Other red-fleshed varieties are similar to the Tom Watson in structure and are similarly handled, so it is believed that the results of this study apply to the watermelon crop as a whole.

Says Railroads Are Depressed

CHICAGO, May 13.—"The earnings of the railways thus far this year should warn business men and public men that if the prevailing policy of both direct and indirect regulation of railways is persisted in the ability of the railways to render good service in years of either bad or good business will be impaired or actually destroyed," said Samuel O. Dunn, editor of the Railway Age, in an address today at the annual convention of the Air Brake Association. "The railways are suffering as much, if not more, from the effects of the present depression as any other of the country's industries. Their net operating income in the first quarter was 32 per cent less than last year, and was the smallest since 1922. The decline in the net operating income of the railways of the western district has been 40 per cent.

"For purposes of regulation railways are classed with public utilities, but because of the stability of the business of public utilities their net earnings have shown almost no decline this year. The business of the railways is very unstable because their freight business fluctuates in accordance with the changes in all branches of industry and commerce.

Operations of the Credit Bureau are constructive and confidential. It does not manufacture or alter your credit record, but merely files your record as you make it. These records are in constant revision; and the local Bureau has an interchange with other bureaus throughout the country. Your credit record follows you when you leave and, if it is bad, will likely be waiting for you at your destination.

And yet, regardless of the remarkably stable earnings of the public utilities, and the wide fluctuation of railway earnings, we apply to the railways, in years of good business, an even more stringent policy of restricting profits than to public utilities. In consequence, even in good years public utilities are allowed to earn larger returns than railroads, while in poor years the average rate of return earned by the railroads declines to not much more than one-half of that of public utilities."

Looking for a Record

On another day in St. Louis, Joe Sewell, the veteran third baseman of the Cleveland Indians, was looking for a record. He was looking for a record in the big league career. He was looking for a record in the big league career. He was looking for a record in the big league career.

Joe Sewell has been fighting to break the record of Deacon Scott, the former Yankee shortstop, who played 1,101 consecutive games in his big league career. Joe reached 1,101 when he had to leave the game and go back to bed.

Sewell had played in 1,404 games during his 10 years in the big league. Up to the opening of the present season, he would have broken Scott's record last summer. He had missed out on games in 1922. It was Tris Speaker who broke up Joe's consecutive game mark.

Tris Didn't Like It

Tris Speaker was emphatically against players striving for consecutive games records.

"I broke up Joe's record once and did it deliberately," said the Gray Eagle, who now is managing the Newark International League club. "The record doesn't mean anything to the ball player and there are times when it hurts a ball team. I told Joe about it once and he said he didn't mind."

Over a stretch of years, no man has been in tip-top condition every day. There are bound to be illnesses. Letting him play when he is actually sick hurts both the team and the player. There are plenty of days when club and player would be better off if the player were in bed.

When Tris told Joe about it, he said, "Of course, Joe is a healthy man and he wants to be in there all the time. But it's a mistake to keep a sick man out there just to set up a freak record. I think such a record ought to be broken, just as soon as it appears the player is trying to make it."

Joe may have agreed with Speaker at the time Tris broke his run, but evidently he has had a change of heart and is out after it again. Otherwise, he hardly would play an inning with a fever of 101.

Rabbit Passes 2000

IN point of long service in games not consecutive, Rabbit Maravilla has set a mark that Joey would have to hustle to equal. The Rabbit played in 2063 big league games up to the beginning of the present season. And he's still going strong. But then the ancient Bunny has been coveting on big league diamonds for 17 years.

Harry Hellmann has been up there 16 years and played in 1939 games before starting out with Cincinnati this season. He will be passing the 2000 mark any day now.

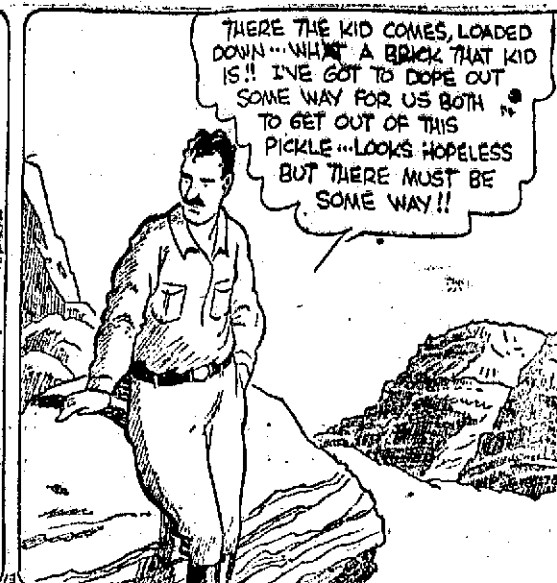

Rogers Hornsby had played in 1935 games before his heel went bad on him this year and he had to be removed from the lineup. Joseph Ignatius Judge has been in there 14 years and played in 1929 games. Sam Rice, the other graybeard on the Washington team, had played in 1854 big league games before he began trisking about again this season.

Schang Near Ruth

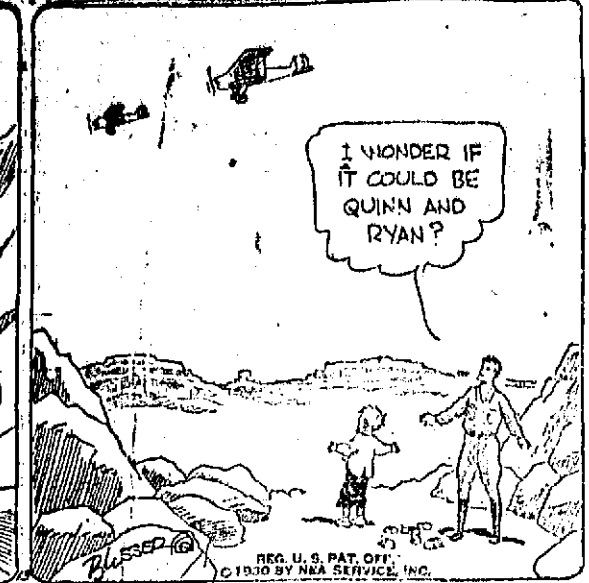

BADE RUTH had played in 1739 games in 16 major league years when the present season started. Wally Schang holds some kind of a record for catchers, having taken part in 1765 games, almost as many as Ruth, in 17 years in the big leagues.

If George Sisler gets into some ball games this year, he will pass the 2000 mark, as he had played in 1939 games when the season opened. But George is nearing the end of the trail. For that matter, so are the others whose games are around the 2000 total.

De Palma Urged to Race In Indianapolis Classic of the $110,000 prize money, as a result of the return of the two-seater cars. The gray-haired De Palma has done little racing since riding mechanics were ruled out seven years ago. They will be back this year.

De Palma and De Paola drive alike, they look alike, and time after time they have demonstrated their courage under the stress of things along the road which so often leads to disaster. De Paola carries numerous scars; De Palma has a limp as a result of a smash up.

De Paola, who races only at Indianapolis, has entered two eight-cylinder cars, and has offered one to De Palma.

De Palma rode as a mechanic for De Palma in 1920. They did not get anywhere. De Palma won, back in 1915. Impatient to get a mount of his own, the youthful De Paola disregarded De Palma's advice that he was not yet ready, and went on his own. Then followed a series of fence smashings, skids and wall crashes which almost had the other racers afraid to go on the same track with him.

"A man would be crazy to let you have a car," Fred Dusenberg, builder of racing cars, told De Paola when he asked for a mount in the spring of 1925. But he gave him one, and De Paola won the race and set the all-time speed record of 101.13 miles an hour average for the 500 miles.

Dixie Touch Down Twins Are Streaks On Diamond

Tennessee's touchdown twins have turned their punch to baseball. They were together in basketball, too.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., May 12.—(P)—In the fall it was football, the winter—Hack and Mack, the touchdown twins and Bobby Dodd, the third man in Tennessee's tireless triumvirate of the gridiron, are punching away again this spring.

If anybody can offer a trio of three-sports stars to compare with this outfit, Tennessee—from the mountains to the Mississippi—would like to hear about them.

First 1,000 Games Worst; Joe Finds 2nd Also Tough

CLEVELAND, May 13.—(P)—After he had played in every game in which the Cleveland Indians participated the past seven and a half years, illness at Boston finally forced Joe Sewell from the lineup.

Sewell, tough infielder, the game previous to the end of the streak, extends this 1,101 consecutive game total by going to bat in the first inning while running a high temperature. He got a fast hit and a runner relieved him. Next game, however, he could not go on.

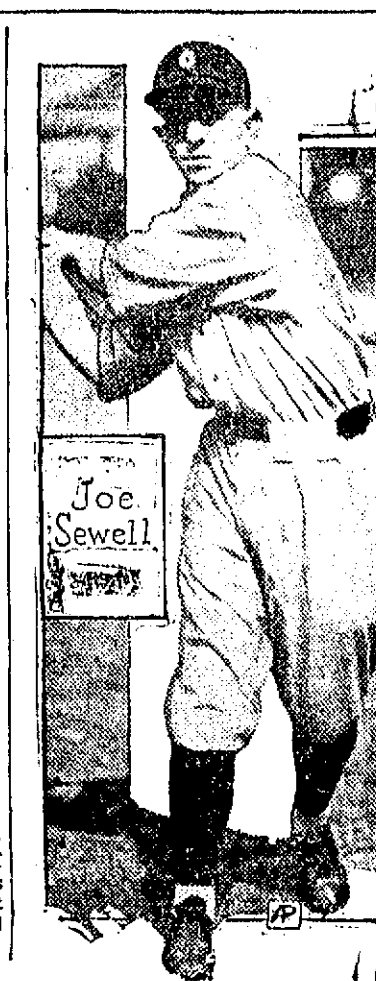

A combination of influenza and hatred to see his chances for a record potential record, which had weathered many minor threats.

Though the little infielder naturally hates to see his chances for a record go, he believes that it's all for the best.

"A player can do the most good for his club if he is in there every day whether fit or not," Sewell said.

Sewell's final tally was 1,102 consecutive games, 205 less than the record compiled by Everett Scott, former infielder for the New York Yankees and Boston Red Sox.

Sewell is only 5 feet six inches tall, but carries 155 pounds hard packed on his frame. He joined the Indians in 1920, taking the place of Ray Chapman, shortstop star who was killed by a pitched ball. Sewell hit .329 that year, and since has compiled an average of .322 a season.

Carlyle's Playing Talent Displayed to Ten Bosses

Atlanta May 12.—(P)—Roy Carlyle, one of baseball's wandering boys, is right back where he started in 1922 after averaging a new club a year since he first joined the Atlanta Crackers.

Roy has played with Charlotte, Memphis and Birmingham, Washington, Boston and New York in the American, Oakland in the Pacific Coast and Kansas City in the American Association. The Crax bought him from Kansas City.

Schoonover Hurt Playing In Talkie

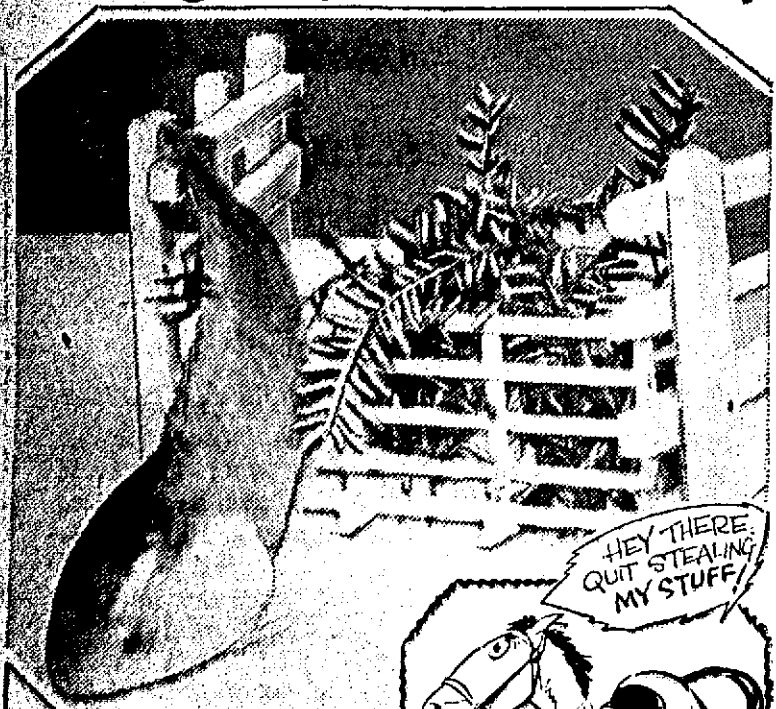

Arkansas Football Star Lands in Hospital at Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., May 13.—Wear C. Schoonover, University of Arkansas all-American end, landed in Hollywood Emergency hospital today as a result of playing the role of an all-American football player before the talkie cameras. Schoonover may be on crutches 10 days. He was injured in the first play when his team, all real all-Americans brought here by the Warner Bros. Film company from Southern, Southern and middle Western colleges, went into action against a picked all-Pacific coast eleven at Pasadena Rose bowl.

Dr. Donald Cass diagnosed Schoonover's injuries as concussion of the knee, complicated by a severe strain. The talking picture in which the eleven play a real game of football is called "Maybe It's Love." The players have roles in the talkie and are called by their real names. Joan Bennett is the leading woman and the male stars, outside of the gridlers, who carry the story, include Joe E. Brown, comedian, and James Hall.

Howard Jones, coach of the University of Southern California football team is a member of the cast in his own real life role.

Nothing Fishy in This Fish Story

NEA Chicago Bureau Here's a steppichase fish that actually leaps the hurdles—and it isn't just another "fish story," either. This queer "walking fish" recently exhibited at a Chicago sportsmen's show actually does move over the ground, stand erect and jump—and if you doubt it, here's the camera's evidence. These fish are found in small streams in India and Egypt and have been known to travel long distances overland.

Old Stars Classed As "Five Thumbed"

ATLANTA, May 3.—(P)—A flock of grizzled old guys with greying hair are in the same class with the Southern Association's tender youth's John D. Martin, president of the loop, has ruled.

In other words, the old warhorses signed as free agents are classified as rookies under the league's Class "B" ruling which requires that each club carry five players who haven't had a season's experience in Class "A" baseball.

Martin's interpretation made "rookies" of such veterans as Lee Meadows, former Pittsburgh pitcher ace, now with Atlanta; Milton Stock, formerly with St. Louis and other National league clubs, another Cracker; Jim Johnson, ex-Brooklyn infielder, on the Atlanta payroll; and Ivy Wingo, one time Cincinnati backstop, who also graces the Atlanta lineup.

Other "rookies" are Wid Matthews, one time spark plug for Philadelphia and Washington; Frank Walker, Atlanta outfielder who once sold himself from the Sally league to the New York Giants; Frank Brazill, Memphis first sacker; and Jim Pool, Nashville first baseman, who has been in about every class of baseball played.

Hurler's Luck Was Punk, But a Rainbow Appeared

NEW YORK, May 13.—(P)—Charley Ruffing, once a pitcher for the Boston Red Sox, perennial collar candidate now has a chance to share in first division splits, because he had tough luck in two early games this year.

Ruffing was traded to the New York Yankees for Cedric Durst, outfielder, after he lost two games for the Red Sox by a one-run margin. Heinie Wagner, Boston manager, made the trade hoping it would alter the luck of his club, which during the early games lost seven games by a single run.

OH YEAH?

The Mississippi youth said that his musical training had been the means of saving his life in a recent flood in his home town.

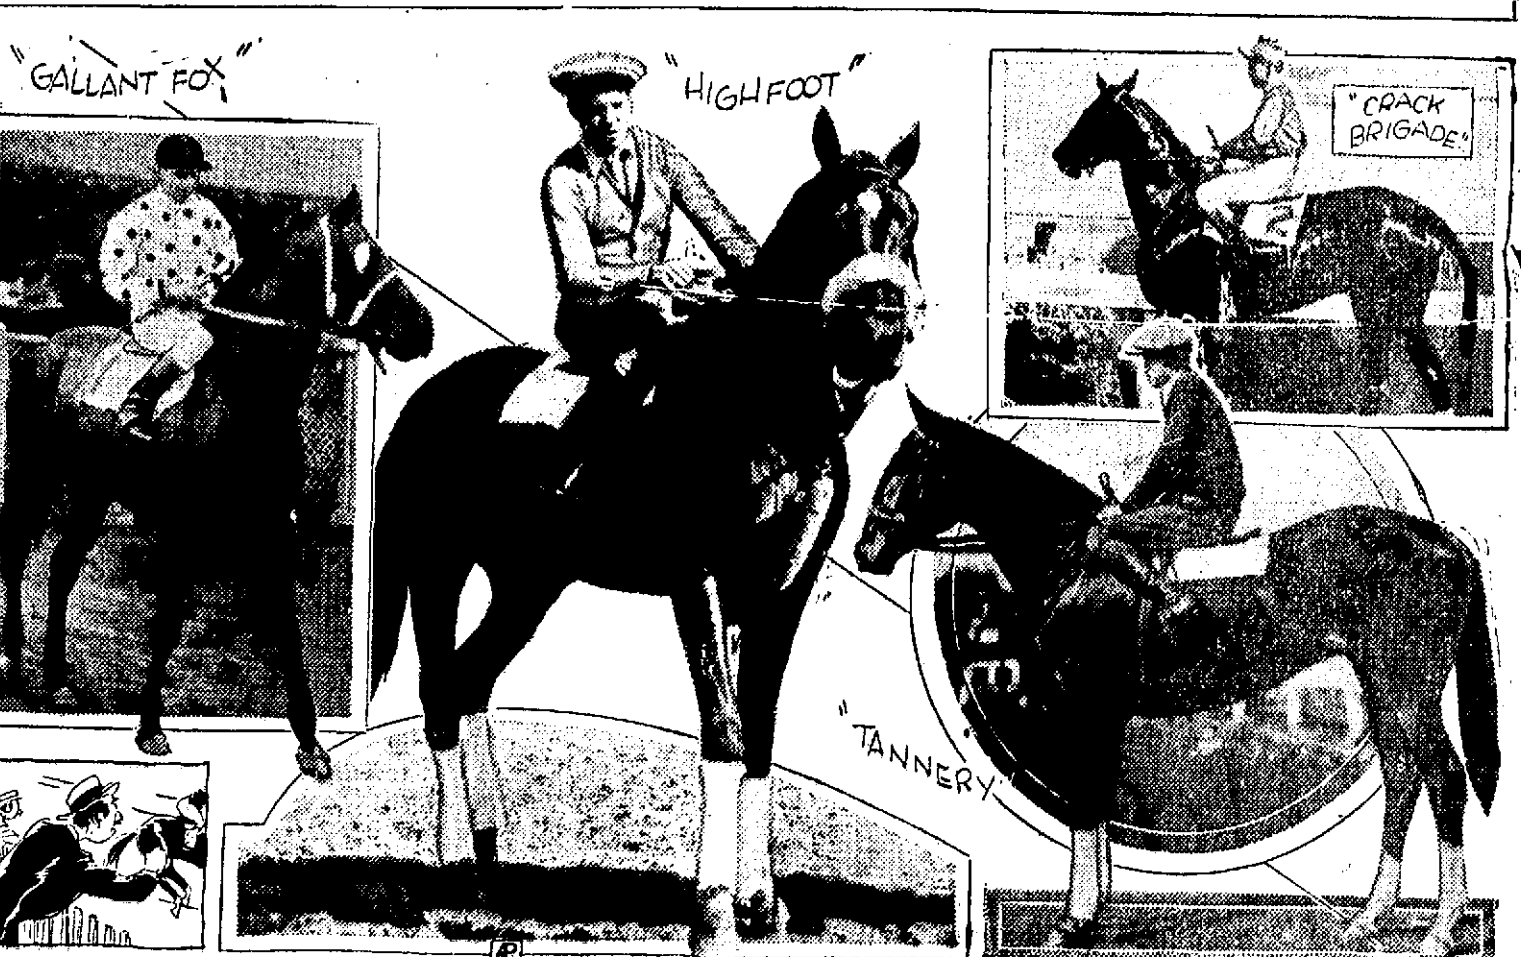

"How was that?" inquired a bystander.

"Well, when the flood struck the town, my father got on a bed and floated down stream."

"And you?"

"I accompanied him on the piano."

Gallant Fox, High Foot and Then Tannery, Named Favorites as Derby Neart

Three favorites and Crack Brigade, also rallying support, to run in the Kentucky Derby, May 17, at Churchill Downs

New York, May 13.—(P)—Day by day the price of Gallant Fox grows slimmer and slimmer in the Kentucky Derby Futures.

The latest quotations of the eastern bookmakers figure the son of Sir Galahad III from William Woodward's Belair Stud a 3 to 1 shot to win the Kentucky classic on May 17.

And if he continues to train in a sensational manner the chances are he will go to the post the even money favorite.

In the opinion of the bookmakers only two thoroughbreds stand a chance to defeat the brilliant three-year-old-trained by Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons. High Foot, a development of the winter season from the Valley Lake stable, and E. F. Pritchard's Tannery are quoted at 6 to 1.

High Foot has been well favored since going into retirement following his defeat of Michigan Boy in the Derby by trial at Jefferson Park, New Orleans. It is only the last few days, however, that Tannery has risen to a place of prominence.

As a two-year-old Tannery started eight times, won five races, was second and went unplaced the other two races. He opened at 100 to 1 in the winter books, but with the inauguration of the spring season his odds were rapidly lowered until today he stands in a place of respect.

Showing improvement on every race, T. M. Cassidy's Crack Brigade is fast moving into the select group. A few days ago he was 20 to 1, but now 15 to 1, is considered a good price on the Son of Light Brigade, which went unplaced but once in seven starts as a juvenile.

Odds of 15 to 1 can be obtained on G. W. Foreman's Baltimore owned Ned O and the Audley Farm's Gallant Knight, which has several sensational workouts to fortify his claim to recognition among the serious contenders for the $50,000 stake. Prior to Ned O's impressive showing in the Remert Handicap at Pimlico, it was possible to obtain 30 to 1 on the gelded son of Camphire.

The Husband Hunter

BY RUTH DEWEY GROVES

BEGIN HERE TODAY

NATLIE CONVERSE tries to remember her feelings over her husband, ALAN, but they quarrel over HERNANDEZ LAMONT, a big, bad, black man, who is to look after her son, HENRY, whose father had saved ALAN's life during the war.

Alarmed at NATLIE's attitude, ALAN seeks sympathy from his secretary, PHILIPPA WEST, who is willing for the opportunity to widen the breach between husband and wife.

PHILIPPA plans several things to arouse NATLIE's suspicion and one day ALAN finds her packing to leave him. Wounded pride prevents either from making a reconciliation. After she goes, the house seems desolate to ALAN and he seeks consolation from his friend, who plays her part cleverly.

Meanwhile, NATLIE regrets her hasty action. She hasn't thought of the family of the black man who promises to take her younger sister back to New York with her. Still she will not let him know, hoping he will beg her to return.

NATLIE's silence merely arouses his suspicion and when he is in his office with PHILIPPA, they go about together constantly, and the secret fosters the thought in his mind that he is abused and neglected until ALAN believes that he loves PHILIPPA instead of NATLIE.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXII

PHILIPPA and ALAN had some very good times together. She discovered the things he liked to do but hadn't. There were several museums he had wanted for years to visit sometime. A few churches of special interest and certain old buildings of historical interest.

Brooklyn Bridge. To walk across it had been a suppressed desire for ever so long. A beautiful mid-winter day came and he and PHILIPPA walked across the bridge. She was as bright and sparkling as the day.

ALAN was impressed with her vitality. She had been up since seven o'clock—so she told him. It was the one morning on which her mother could sleep late. "And always wants his breakfast early, no matter what day it is," she explained, adding laughingly, "Sunday is wasted on him."

"You certainly do get a kick out of life, don't you?" ALAN remarked after musing a while on the things they had done together, while PHILIPPA walked with him in silence.

She did not answer him, sensing he had more to say. "You love the theater and dancing," he went on reflectively, "and yet you don't grouch when I get fed up on them a bit and want something like this."

He waved his hand to indicate the change in their recreation and PHILIPPA understood all that the gesture was meant to convey.

But still she did not answer.

ALAN talked on, telling her how necessary it was to have a companion spirit if pet ideas were to be shared; how impossible it was to enjoy life alone, or with a person of dissimilar tastes.

Finally her unusual silence caught his attention. He drew his gaze away from the river view and looked down at her. She was not tall—just an appealing height to ALAN's mind. He wanted to be leaned on, and PHILIPPA had been giving a good performance of a girl who could stand up alone just so far and no farther.

He saw at once she was depressed. It was a quick change, but when he asked her what was wrong she insisted there was nothing the matter.

ALAN let it pass, for a while. But she continued quiet and pensive. Presently they turned back toward the Manhattan end of the bridge at PHILIPPA's suggestion, after she had taken a hurried glance at her wrist watch.

"PHILIPPA, what is it?" ALAN pressed.

For answer PHILIPPA slid her hand down his arm until she found his palm, where she nestled her fingers confidently and left them there.

"Please," ALAN pleaded.

"I've never had anyone to enjoy things with before," PHILIPPA said with sudden warmth. "I mean all sorts of things. Some men like the shows and night clubs and some like exploring a city the way we've been doing, but it's hard to find a man who likes everything."

"That's just what I've been saying about girls," ALAN reminded her.

"And now that we have found out what wonderful times we can have together, we have to give it up," PHILIPPA told him, her voice filled with rebellion.

"Give it up?" ALAN echoed vacantly.

PHILIPPA nodded. "Don't you hate interference?" she asked, her well-simulated anger mounting rapidly.

"I don't know what you're talking about," ALAN informed her.

"You might guess," she returned. "It's Mother and Dad, of course. They're kicking about my going out with you."

For a moment ALAN had nothing to say. He was surprised into a wordless state by the fact that his attentions to PHILIPPA could be objectionable to her parents. Then: "But," he began, PHILIPPA interrupted him.

"You needn't say it," she cried.

"I know. They don't understand that we're only just good friends, ALAN. And their standard is out of date, it's true. But I've always let them tell me what to do, and now I haven't the courage to go against them."

"They don't want you to give up your position, do they?" ALAN asked fearfully. The bare thought of losing her services in the office dismayed him.

"Oh no, of course not. They are not as absurd as that, ALAN," PHILIPPA calmed him. "But they do object to my going out with you."

She paused and sighed heavily. "Because you're a married man."

She pulled away from him a little and waited with bated breath for what he would say to her. His hand tightened on her fingers and she smiled the faintest bit. She easily imagined the compressing of his lips that usually preceded a speech of determination from him.

"Suppose you tell them that I'm not a married man?" he said quietly.

PHILIPPA took time to think before answering. She knew he was not suggesting that she deceive her parents. What then?

Her heart gave a joyous bound as the obvious answer came to her. His marriage was purely nominal. He was telling her, and he wished her to tell her parents that it did not count. It was only a matter of time before it would be nonexistent. He must mean that NATLIE was going to divorce him, since he could not divorce her without leaving the state.

She looked up at him. "What do you mean, ALAN?" she asked gravely.

Her question acted as a stop sign for ALAN. It brought him to a mental halt, let him see his conduct as another person might view it. What did he mean? That was the crux of the whole matter, although he had not realized it before. What did he mean? What was he saying to this girl? What was he going to do about her?

For a moment he wavered, afraid to go ahead upon the way he had chosen. It might be all a mistake. The past perhaps held more restraining influence upon him than he knew. He could surmise this, fear it. And yet he felt defiant.

His decision to go on was quickly made. PHILIPPA did not know that he had been in a struggle with himself, so brief was it and so prompt his reply to her question.

"I mean that I feel free to think of you as I do, PHILIPPA," he said.

PHILIPPA continued to look at him, and wait. They had stopped walking, following an instinctive urge to stand and face what both knew to be a crisis.

ALAN swept his gaze over the skyline of the towering city that reared before them and turned back to his companion. The city was too gigantic to be real; the girl was palpably genuine. He could come close to her, understand her. She had little or none of the exclusiveness of soul that separated him from NATLIE.

She was woman—man's woman. She could give. Love would be a medium of exchange with her, not a commodity that must be brought to her with ceremony and ritual on her own terms. In her eyes lay the promise of adulation for her mate. At any rate it seemed so to ALAN, inspired to such thinking by his heart hunger and his disappointment in NATLIE.

He had no great love to offer PHILIPPA, but he could give her loyalty and faithfulness, companionship and interest. He did admire and respect her, did like her and think she was adorable, sweet, desirable.

And it was stupid to say that he could never love again. No one's future was predictable. He remembered having told NATLIE that he'd marry only once. Now he knew that he meant he could love only one woman at a time. At least that, he told himself as he studied PHILIPPA's innocent countenance, was what he thought he meant. Perhaps tomorrow—next day—next year—it would be different and he would know he hadn't meant that at all.

Well, if a fellow couldn't be sure of how he really felt about such things, or of the future, why not gamble? Why not take what was to be had? Why worry about the future?

The danger of answering these questions while in a mood of depression did not appear to ALAN. They were comforting to his hopelessness. To say "Why not?" to them made it easier for him to face things with PHILIPPA.

He'd felt a bit of a cad about her at times. He didn't want to confess that he still suffered over NATLIE, and yet he felt sure she should know. But shirking the responsibility of admitting the truth, and crying "Fate," was less emotionally upsetting.

Suddenly PHILIPPA reached out and put her hands on his arms.

Zasu Pitts "Wail"

of a Good Vocalist

The talking screen has produced jazz singers, blues singers, hot singers and crooners—but with the entry of Zasu Pitts into the realm of song there is now a new classification to add to the list.

Miss Pitts is the audible screen's first "wailer."

She brings the new technique forward in "Honey," Nancy Carroll's second starring production, which comes to the Senger theatre on next Wednesday and Thursday.

Miss Pitts of the big sad blue eyes, who can wrench a tear or a laugh out of any film audience anywhere, is cast as a gorgeous, ever-crying housemaid in "Honey." As such she sings a reprise of one of the picture's tuneful numbers.

The song has a particularly light and catchy melody, but Miss Pitts, with tears welling out of her expressive orbs, and with sobs accentuating each line sings it as though her heart were breaking. The effect is—well, one has to see it and hear it to appreciate Miss Pitts' genius.

Singing is a newly discovered talent with Zasu. Although she has been in 12 talking pictures, including "The Dummy" and "Paris," she never has previously been spotted for a song.

NOT RESPONSIBLE

"No one seems to be able to understand me."

"No wonder, your mother was a telephone operator and your father a train announcer."

OUT OUR WAY

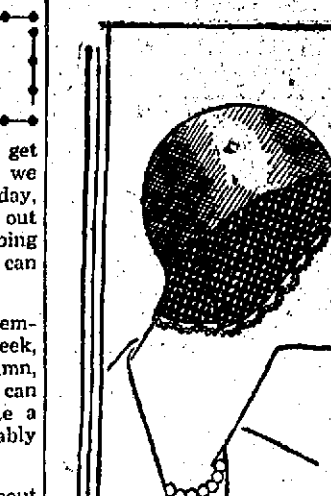

Kiddies Club

It doesn't seem like it will ever get through raining, does it? Well, we hope that it won't rain on Saturday, so that we can have a big crowd out for the club. Remember, we're going to have games that all of you can play, and a new song to learn.

Now, tomorrow we'll list the members who have birthdays this week, and if your name isn't in this column, be sure and phone in, so that we can have your present. We had quite a bunch last week, and we'll probably have as many more this week.

Tomorrow we'll tell you all about the games for Saturday, too. Be sure and get your folks to see Nancy Carroll in "Honey." You'll love it. And a little girl named Milla Green has a big part in it. She sings a funny song called "Sing, You Sinners," that's a riot. "Honey" will be here on Wednesday and Thursday, and be sure you see it.

Scouts Prepare For Camp Season

Many Scouts From Hope Planning to Attend Camp Pioneer

TEXARKANA, May 13.—The summer season is approaching when the scouts of the Tex-Ark Council will leave their school work and will begin preparing for the camp season that starts at Camp Pioneer June 3 and which ends on July 2. The camp is run by the Tex-Ark Council and boys from Bowie, Cass, Camp, Morris and Titus counties in Texas and from Miller, Howard, Hempstead, Little River and Sevier counties in Arkansas will attend the camp. Many applications from boys of the area have already been received at Scout Headquarters and troops of the council are making reservations for huts for their troops.

Camp Pioneer is a busy place, as everything is being prepared for the opening date. New equipment is being installed, extensions are being added to the kitchen and to the lounge, a stage is being constructed, and all the buildings are being repaired for the anticipated increase, indicated by the early enrollments.

One of the most interesting features of this year's camp will be the Indian camp for boys who have already had at least one season's experience in a council camp. Only fourteen boys may enroll for this feature which will be directed by Thomas Yerxa of Houston, an Eagle scout who was a member of the Indian party that attended the International Jamboree in England about two years ago.

Another of the features of this camp will be the overnight hikes. About twelve scouts will leave the camp for an over-night hike into the woods with pack mules that will be furnished by the camping committee to carry the heavy camp equipment.

The scouts who are going to Camp Pioneer will meet at the new union station on the opening date of each period at 11 a. m. where they will entrain for Potter, Ark., the nearest town to camp.

Denny's Latest At Grand Wednesday

Reginald Denny made the dialogue version of "One Hysterical Night" Universal all-talking comedy which will open Wednesday at the Grand theatre, in two languages—English and American!

Apprehensive that his English audiences, in England, would fail to understand certain American slang expressions, Denny, himself of English birth, had certain passages noted in the script during the production of the picture.

When these marked sequences were made by Director William James Craft, the American version was followed by the English one.

Thus, for the American version Denny said:

"A nut, eh?"

In England a "nut" is a flip, a dude or a stage door Johnny, not a lunatic, so for the English version he said:

"A bit cracked, eh?"

Girl's Knowledge of Law Wins In Court

EVANSTON, Ill., May 13.—(AP)—Louise Gillarde, 18-year-old high school girl, gave a practical demonstration of her knowledge of law Monday when arraigned before a magistrate charged with having had an exhaust whistle on her auto.

"They," she told the magistrate, referring to police who arrested her, "had no authority to book me. For there is no mention of exhaust whistles in the statute—it refers only to horns and sirens."

The magistrate agreed and released her.

But, continued Miss Gillarde, "I had enough for the arresting officers to hear, 'you could have charged me with violating a state law which does mention exhaust whistles. Now late now, I've removed mine; hee-hee!'"

WILLIE HARRIS,

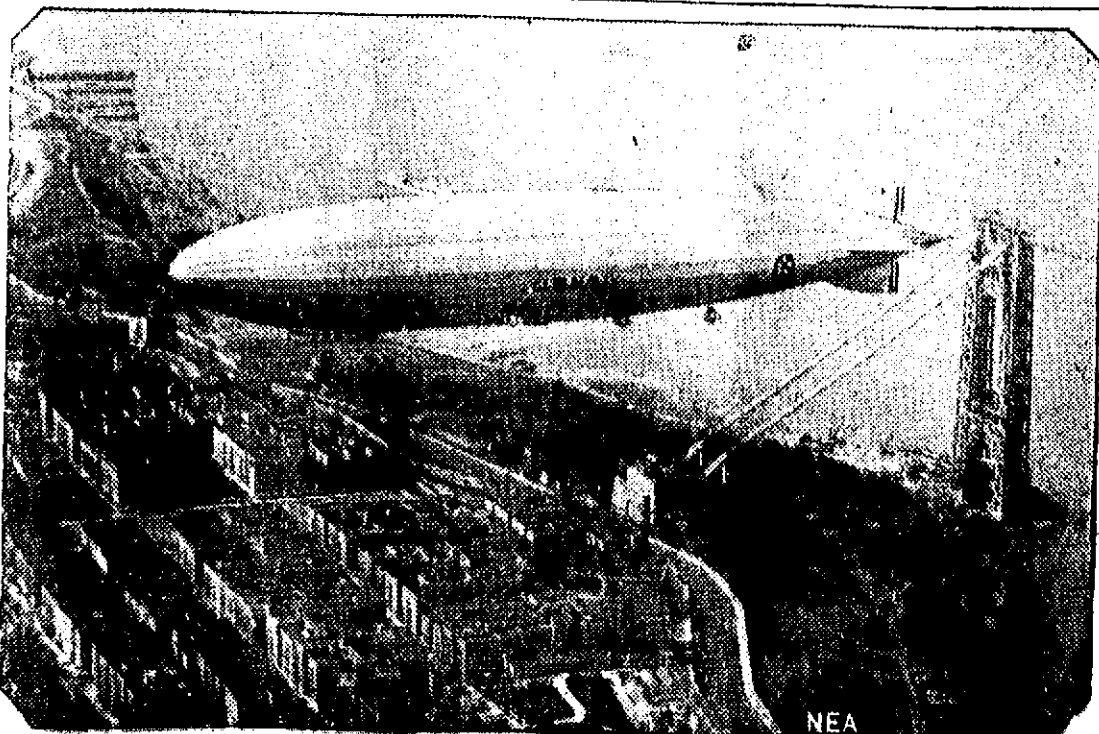

Identity of the young lady is withheld, but the memory of her answer lingers on with the instructor conducting a science course at a local high school. One of the requirements in the written quiz was: "Define a bolt and nut and explain the difference, if any." The girl wrote:

"A bolt is a thing like a stick of hard metal, such as iron with a square bunch on one end and a lot of scratches wound around the other end. A nut is similar to the bolt only just the opposite, being a hole in a chunk of iron sawed off short, with wrinkles around the inside of the hole."

The startled professor marked that one with a large "A."—De Lavel Monthly.

Naval Air Giant "Attacks" New York

"Look out below!" ... No more pleasure trip was this which the navy's giant dirigible Los Angeles was taking over New York. Theoretically, the metropolis was being attacked, its skyscraper towers splintered with high explosives and its streets drenched with gas, when this picture was made. Naval observers said the "attack" was a tactical success. That's the Hudson in the background; note the tower of the bridge, largest in the world, which is being built to span the famous river.

Fighting Pastor Laughs at Jail

Rev. "Fighting Bob" Shuler, pastor of Trinity Methodist church at Los Angeles, whose fiery radio talks drew him a congregation of 4000 and landed him in jail when he denounced judges in connection with an oil swindle case, is shown here in his cell. Shuler, in the lower bunk, and his cell mate seem to be enjoying prison life. Adjudged guilty of contempt of court, Rev. Shuler was given 20 days.

COATED TONGUE YELLOW LOOK

Often Signs of Biliousness That Indicate the Need of Black-Draught.

Austin, Texas.—"In the sixteen years of my own housekeeping, Thedford's Black-Draught has been my best stand-by in the way of medicine," says Mrs. J. M. Rich, of 1700 Holly Street, this city.

"I have found Black-Draught to be the best medicine I have ever used for the relief of colds. I have been using it in my home for years."

"My father used it also in his home and gave it to us children. Whenever we had the usual children's complaints, mother would make up a tea of Black-Draught and give us. We always felt better after taking it."

"I also give it to my children when they have colds or upset stomach. Sometimes they get feverish from biliousness. If they begin to get yellow, or their tongues are coated, I make a tea (of Black-Draught) and give to them in small doses. They don't mind taking it at all."

Refuse imitations! Insist on the genuine Thedford's Black-Draught which has been in use nearly a hundred years.
